Liberals Explode Loudly Over Johnson's Reorganization of NRA

The liberals in the official family don't like the looks of the new machinery. Particularly they object to two things:

1. Installing an army officer, in the person of Colonel George A. Lynch, one of General MacArthur's henchmen, as a sort of top sergeant over the Blue Eagle roost.

2. Establishing industrial relations boards on all code authorities to handle labor disputes. The effect of this action is completely to junk the long established and experienced Conciliation Service of the Labor Department.

Secretary of Labor Perkins has been frowning on this last move. She and Johnson have been on the best of terms, but now they may not be. Johnson did not consult Miss Perkins when he set up the new labor boards; also his move tends to put labor more under the domination of industry.

Johnson justified Lynch's appointment as NRA Administrative Officer because he was the "most advanced thinker in the army." Possibly more important, the two men were West Point class-mates.

But this effusive laudation failed to impress critical cabinet members who most emphatically challenge Johnson's judgment in putting an army officer in such an important civilian post. Lynch, they point out, knows nothing about NRA, has had neither labor nor industrial experience.

They view his appointment as setting an unwarranted precedent, certain to give foes of the Administration fodder for their charges of "dictators" and "military rule."

Old Story

To Ferdinand Pecora, fighting General Counsel of the Senate Bank Investigating Committee, the tactics and specious arguments of the Wall Street lobby against the Administration's stock exchange bill are an old story.

He compares them to the following situation:

A young lawyer, fresh out of college, solicited advice from a veteran of the bar. What rule, he asked would a successful lawyer lay down for the guidance of one just starting his legal career

"My boy," the old timer replied, "the rule to follow is very simple. When your opponent has you licked on the facts, go into court and talk law. When he has you licked on the law, go into court and talk facts.

"But if he has you licked on both the facts and the law, then go into court and raise hell generally."

Battle Scent

Hale and virile despite his 73 years, the Caustic-tongued Missourian is manifesting all the signs of yearning to go back to the Senate.

It happens that dry, Republican Roscoe Patterson is up for re-election this year, and Reed's friends are urging him to enter the race. Most eager of all is his new wife, the former Nell Donnelly, wealthy Kansas City dress manufacturer, whom Reed rescued from kidnappers last year.

To this budding ambition is attributed Reed's sudden appearance as counsel for good Doctor Wirt. A master publicist and grandstander, Reed saw possibilities for breaking into the headlines, and he never has been known to pass up such an opportunity.

Whether Reed tosses his hat back into the ring remains to be seen. Meanwhile his presence in Washington has revived all the anecdotes which surround his many years on Capitol Hill. One concerns Reed's attempt to entertain bald Atlee Pomerene, of Ohio, when the latter first came to the Senate.

CITY TO REPAIR EIGHT STREETS; "DADS" BUSY

$3,000 Appropriated From License-Tax Fund for Resurfacing, Repairing; Ordinance Setting Liquor Fines Read as Two Others Are Approved under Suspension; Council to Urge Act on Water Ordinance.

Action on six ordinances, a number unprecedented in one night's session in the past several years, comprised the bulk of business accomplished by council Wednesday evening.

Three of the ordinances were passed under suspension of rules, one was read for the second time, another for the first time, and another, that regulating the price paid for water, was re-referred to the ordinance committee for action.

An ordinance to transfer $3,000 from the automobile license and gasoline tax fund to the street repair fund was passed under suspension. This provides for re-surface and repair by a combination of oil or tar and crushed stone eight streets and one drive.

NINE IN PROGRAM

Those to be resurfaced and repaired are:

S. Pickaway-st from the Pennsylvania railroad to Town-st, 2,150 feet;

S. Washington-st from the Pennsylvania railroad to Town-st, 2,440 feet;

E. Mill-st from Washington to Clinton-st, 900 feet;

Pleasant-st, the entire street, 800 feet;

N. Pickaway-st, High-st to the Ringgold-pk, 3,432 feet;

E. Mound-st from Mingo to the Pennsylvania railroad, 1,360 feet;

E. Main-st from Mingo to the Pennsylvania railroad, 1,825 feet;

E. Franklin-st from Mingo to Main, 1,113 feet;

Berger hospital main drive, 822 feet.

The entire program covers 45,102 square yards to be resurfaced and repaired. The work will be under the direction of Service Director William M. Justice.

The other two ordinances passed under suspension of rules were to appropriate $300 to pay foremen on the north end sewer, hospital landscaping, and hospital cement projects, and $65.15 to pay Alfred Lee, lumber man, for wire and stakes for the Hargus creek and north end sewer projects.

SET LIQUOR FINES

The ordinance read for the second time concerned governing and controlling the sale of liquor in the city. Local officials have been instructed by state authorities that all fines collected under the liquor laws can be kept here instead of divided with the state provided the city acts on legislation comforming with requirements.

The ordinance as read the second time, and which will not come to a vote until councilmen have investigated their powers in legislating, sets fines for violation of the state law in handling for sale, transportation or in any other way at not less than $100 nor more than $1,000 fine and not less than one month or more than six months in the workhouse or both.

The ordinance also contains a clause declaring that all licenses and permits be conspicuously posted. Failure to comply with this law will result in a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100.

The legislation does not mention a 12 o'clock closing law as advocated but some local people because City Solicitor Carl C. Leist says there are some permits, such as for night clubs, which allow sale under the state law during the night. Council plans to interview

POLICE RADIO WINS SUPPORT

Shaner Advises Purchase For Police; Ball Contemplated For Funds.

A movement is growing in council to purchse a short-wave radio receiving set to co-operate in the state-wide drive against crime which is being furthered by the highway patrol and other enforcement agencies through the use of the radio.

Safety Director L. T. Shaner advised the purchase of a short-wave set which he says can be obtained for about $30. It would be installed in the mayor's office and would be in use at all times.

The state system which is being broadened would thus be provided to the city.

Councilman Ben Gordon, after Shaner's statement, immediately championed the proposal but the question of money kept council from any action.

Mayor W. B. Cady told council of a successful Policeman's ball held in Lancaster recently which could be put on here to obtain money to buy the set. Since the sheriff's department, too, is hoping to extend its radio service to its automobiles the mayor pointed out that it could be a Sheriff's-Policeman's ball.

2 MORE IN RACE

Washington C. H. Mayor Assailed; May Resign Job

Mayor Curtin Criticized For Lax Law Enforcement; Fine Brings Tempest.

WASHINGTON C. H., April 19.—Declaring that he is in poor health and that the nervous strain he is under is not worth the salary connected with the job, Mayor Peter Curtin in a curbstone interview, Wednesday, told a local reporter that he would resign but for the reason that "I don't want to let the boys down."

Mayor Curtin was the object of a bitter attack in a council meeting this week when he was criticized for lax law enforcement.

The tempest in which Mayor Curtin is involved developed last Saturday afternoon when an intoxicated man drove his automobile through the plate glass window of the Cheney shoe store. The driver was fined $25 and costs. Immediately began talk of petitions seeking removal, impeachment and so on.

"If they don't want me. They don't have to throw me out," the mayor, known to everyone in this city as 'Pete,' says. "I'm getting to the place in life where I must get all the enjoyment out of it I can. I'm ready to go to the country and take things easy."

GORDON SAYS TREASURY LOW

Finance Chairman Says Operating Expenses Must Be Kept At Minimum.

"Watch your step from now on," was the warning hurled at council and the administration Wednesday evening by Ben H. Gordon, chairman of the council finance committee, who painted a depressing picture of the city's financial condition from now until the next tax distribution sometime the latter part of September or early October.

"We are going to have to make every penny count to pay current expenses of the city," Councilman Gordon warned, "and that means that we can't afford to expand our expenses in any way.

About $14,000 is all the general fund has in store for operating expenses until the next distribution. Out of this must be paid salaries of all officials and employees besides bills to utilities.

Gordon is hopeful that a check will be sent to the city from the beer tax. "In 1933," he said, "the city received a check for $3,000 in June from the source and we are hopeful that a similar or even larger check will come this year. It will certainly be welcomed." He also spoke of the possibility of a liquor tax check coming to this city but was uncertain concerning the date or the amount.

NEW SUSPECT IN LINDBERGH CASE

NEW YORK, April 19.—Nearly five thousand dollars of the Lindbergh ransom money has been recovered by police and federal authorities, it was revealed here today.

While police were checking the latest suspect in the famous kidnaping and murder case, who was charged by U. S. Marshal John J. Murphy of Boston with a resemblance to the Scandinavian 'John' who collected the $50,000 ransom from Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, it was alleged that he had purchased a Swedish trinket with part of the ransom money.

The ransom delivered by Dr. Condon on the night of April 2, 1932, in St. Raymond's cemetery in the Bronx was made up of five, ten and twenty dollar bills.

Author of Old-Time Liquor Law Barred From Law Practice

BELLEFONTAINE, April 19.—Dow Aikin, 73-year-old attorney and author of Ohio's famous liquor tax enacted two decades ago, today was under suspension for 20 months from the practice of law.

The suspension order was handed down by Judge Lowell Bodey of Urbana, sitting in common pleas court here by special assignment, after hearing the charges of a special committee appointed by the Logan-co bar association.

The bar association asked for disbarment of the aged attorney charging that he had mishandled trust funds as guardian of Harriet M. Dow, an incompetent.

ASSEMBLY TO AGAIN BALLOT ON SALES TAX

Leaders Order All Members to Be Present for Vote Thursday

DEFEAT EXPECTED

Be Present or Face Arrest, is Order

COLUMBUS, April 19.—With the White administration determined to get every member of the house of representatives on record on the retail sales tax, the house sergeant-at-arms was instructed to have all members present at 1:30 p. m., today even if it is necessary to arrest some to compel their attendance.

Although 106 members answered the roll call at the session last night - several more than have voted on most bills at the special taxation session - administration leaders would not permit the controversial tax bill to come to a vote until every elected member who has not died or resigned was in his seat.

CONTACTS TEN

Eleven members were absent. John W. Edwards, Cincinnati, the house sergeant-at-arms, has communicated with all but one of them and received assurance that all of those physically able to attend would be here this afternon.

Edwards said he doubted that it would be necessary to invoke his power to arrest absent members to compel their attendance, but that he was prepared to do so should the necessity arise.

Parliamentary procedure unused by the Ohio legislature for 31 years was resorted to by administration leaders in a desperate effort to keep those members present last night from leaving the city before the fourth and final vote on the thrice-defeated sales tax measure is taken this afternoon.

Instead of adjourning last night, the house technically remained in session throughout the night under a "call of the house," with an assistant clerk calling the name of the 11 absent members at frequent intervals.

The members were "excused" to go to their hotels for the night, but were warned by the President Pro

Hughes Called To Tell Names

COLUMBUS, April 19.—Col. John A. Hughes, director of the state department of liquor control, was called upon today by a senate investigating committee to submit the names of the 25 or 30 members of the legislature he accused of requesting the liquor department to "violate the law."

A subpoena was issued by the senate committee headed by Sen. Carl D. Sheppard (R) Akron, directing the liquor department chief to be present at a hearing in the capitol at 1 p. m., this afternoon.

"Inasmuch as the investigation by the senate liquor control investigating committee of the conduct of affairs of the department of liquor control is now functioning in a systematic manner and its work will not be interfered with by delving into an incidental though important matter, we have issued a subpoena directing Col. John A. Hughes, director of the department of liquor control to appear before the committee at 1 p. m.," read a formal statement issued by the Sheppard committee.

The chairman said Hughes would be asked to "present the names of the members of the legislature requesting the department 'to violate the law,' together with any facts purporting to support his charges in connection therewith."

Hughes made the charges in a speech in Cincinnati recently, offering to turn over the names to the senate committee if it desired. After first sidetracking a move to call the director before it immediately, the Sheppard committee reconsidered its action.

'SHIRT SLEEVES' SHOWN TONIGHT

Good Cast, Nearly All Characters of Equal Importance, In Junior Play.

"Shirt Sleeves" the three-act domestic comedy being presented tonight and tomorrow night at the high school auditorium by the Junior class, is unique in one respect, that it has no star roles—most of the characters being of approximately equal importance.

The batteries for the play include Horace Gilmore as Franklin Rand, the retired publisher who is tempted into too snug a security during times of prosperity and into despair under adversity. Eloise Hatzo takes the role of his wife, who is spoiled by the life of comfort and ease. Lydia Given as Diana, the eldest girl of the family; Esther and Theodore Rand, the mischievous twins of the family who come in for their share of comedy are portrayed by Dorothy Fohl and Joe Bell. Roderick Watts as Donald Rand and Doris Moffitt as Margie Scanlon, his friend, make the greatest character change. One of the strongest comedy roles of the play is taken by Doris Lindsey as the maid, assisted by Robert Teal as Elmer, her friend.

"Shirt Sleeves" is one of the Gateway Series of Tested Plays, having been presented and tested in high schools and colleges throughout the country before having been rewritten.

Curtain time is 8 o'clock.

PATROL COOPERATES IN RADIO HOOK-UP TO BETTER LAW ENFORCEMENT IN STATE

The new state highway patrol radio station WPGQ at Columbus will form the pivotal point in the coordination of Ohio's modern program for better communication between city police, county sheriffs and other public safety authorities.

Many Ohio cities have operated police radio stations, but the extent of their activities has been chiefly local. Now arrangements have been made for a coordinated hookup between the Columbus patrol station and police radios WPDI at Columbus, WPGI at Portsmouth, WPDM at Dayton, WKDU at Cincinnati and the Buckeye Sheriffs' Association station WPGG at Findlay.

OUTLET PROVIDED

Through the cooperation of the Michigan state police radio system, Ohio has an outlet to all the states in the eastern and central United States now using radio communication. Many other states plan similar hookups.

The second station of the proposed five-station hookup of the highway patrol will be located at or near Canton for transmission and exchange of messages with police radios WPDG at Youngstown, WPDO at Akron, WRBH at Cleveland.

WRDQ at Toledo is expected to work with the Findlay station in a few weeks.

The Columbus patrol station, under present plans, would be in charge of the entire traffic for the state and would carry on two-way conversations with other stations in the unified system.

Traffic already handled through the patrol station has included messages from most of the western Ohio sheriffs and various police departments.

Highway Director O. W. Merrell, under whom the highway patrol operates, is confident that greater effectiveness in public safety will be obtained by the unified radio system.

TO SHOW RESULTS

Although the highway patrol is primarily intended for motor vehicle law enforcement, the coordination of its work with that of the police and sheriff of the state through the radio hookup is expected by Merrell to show productive results in deterring other types of law violation.

Broadcast over the hookup, for example, are messages such as the following:

"Authority United States Department of Justice, Columbus, O. Be on the lookout for three men and possibly one woman armed with machine gun."

The Columbus radio patrol station is in charge of Lieut. Alfred E. Tucker.

People walking on W. Main-st. past Griffith & Martin's store are surprised when they step on the rug placed on the sidewalk and wonder what its all about since this is the first time they have had a rug to walk on on a city street.

This is just a way that the manufacturer has to prove the wearing qualities of this rug and Griffith & Martin are leaving it on the sidewalk for two weeks. During this time any person can make a bid on the rug and after the two weeks of demonstration the rug will be sold to the highest bidder.

PLAN TWO FLIGHTS INTO STRATOSPHERE

Army and Geographic Society Will Co-Operate.

Washington.—Two stratosphere ascents to the highest point to which it is practicable for a balloon to lift a man, will be made in the United States during the coming summer in the hope of clearing up the problems of the upper air that are still puzzling to science, it was announced by the National Geographic society and the United States army air corps, sponsors of the project. The balloon, with a capacity of 3,000,000 cubic feet, will be the largest ever constructed. It is estimated that it will rise to a height of more than 15 miles above sea level.

The first ascent will be made in June by Capt. Albert W. Stevens, noted aerial observer and photographer of the army air corps, who conceived the project, and Maj. William Kepner, balloon expert of the army air corps. If this flight is successful, the same balloonists will make a second ascent in September, in order to check observations under similar conditions.

Scientists as Advisers.

To advise in regard to the scientific plans and equipment, and to direct similar studies of the data collected, Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic society, has formed a committee of recognized outstanding American scientists.

The huge balloon to be used in the ascent will have a gas capacity five times that of the bag in which Commander Settle established his 11½-mile record last November; and nearly three and a half times that of the Soviet balloon which in September rose more than 12 miles above the earth.

The exact point at which the balloon will take the air has not been selected, but will probably be in the northern great plains region. Such a choice, it is pointed out, will give ample room for drift to the northeast, east, or southeast and a landing in open country, so that the bag, after it has made its ascent, can be salvaged.

The completed plans for the flight are due to the efforts of Captain Stevens, who has gathered data during the past 11 months directed toward the use of stratosphere flights of the largest balloon which it is practicable to construct, and an ascent to the highest point to which it is believed possible for man to rise in a gas bag, with hope of a safe landing. The mere attainment of altitude, however, is not a primary object of the ascents. It is desirable to reach the greatest attainable height above the earth in order that conditions there can be observed.

Captain Stevens has penetrated the lower levels of the stratosphere by airplane on numerous occasions and also has served as observer on a number of army balloon ascensions. During his high altitude flying he has collected much scientific data. In a flight over Dayton, Ohio, in October, 1928, he reached an altitude of 39,150 feet and obtained the only complete record of the thermometer readings ever made in America, showing on the same day the "temperature gradient" in the region from the earth to the stratosphere. Other such records of temperatures, from the earth to an altitude of approximately 80,000 feet, is one of the objectives of the 1931 ascents. Such data will be extremely valuable in weather studies.

Trap Stratosphere Air.

Another project of importance will be the trapping of samples of stratosphere air at several levels. These specimens will be analyzed and studied later in physical and chemical laboratories.

The preliminary "agenda" for scientific data to be collected during the ascents, contains 14 other items varying from high-level photography and the ascertainment of the electrical condition of the air at various levels, to cosmic ray studies and efforts to determine ozone concentration. The mysterious ozone layer of the upper air which some scientists assert is all that saves life on the earth from destruction by ultra-short light rays, is thought to lie far above the highest point that can be reached by a manned balloon. It is hoped, however, that evidences of an increasing ozone content of the air can be detected 15 miles up.

In order to house the many instruments and automatic recording devices that will be taken aloft, the balloon will have attached to it a spherical gondola of light metal 9 feet in diameter. This diameter is two feet greater than that of the gondolas used by Professor Piccard and Commander Settle, and will provide a cubic capacity more than twice as great.

The instruments, many of them designed and modified by Captain Stevens as a result of trials during high altitude flights, will be largely automatic, leaving observer and pilot free to take care of the many activities in the gondola that will require personal attention. A number of tiny cameras, using motion picture film, will automatically and tirelessly "read" dials and clock faces simultaneously at frequent intervals.

CHAPTER SIXTY

Suddenly, a figure rolled up to the Sergeant. A man spoke silently. The Sergeant moved toward the searchlight. The brightness ceased its steady circling, and a straight and piercing gleam shot out to the starboard and rested there. The deck of a darkened motor boat, now only fifty feet distant, was alight. The light wavered, dropped. Patricia saw white letters outlined along the side of the craft. She darted forward.

"It's the Lazy Mary!"

The Sergeant snatched a megaphone and held it to his lips.

"Stand by," he shouted through the rain and the storm and the darkness. "Stand by."

There was a flash of red and then another. A burst of gunfire had answered his hail. And then the Lazy Mary, spitting bullets behind her, leaped into life and sped into the blackness of the Sound.

The chase was short. Bill McGee's boat was fast, but the police launch had come upon him before his engines had time to whirl themselves to their full speed, and he could not escape. Patricia lay flat upon the wet deck—she had been thrust there by Clark when the bullets began to fly — half sick with the fearful motion of the boat and half exhilarated by the unnatural excitement of the night. Across the deck, the police had lumbered a one-pound cannon into action. Now she heard it boom. Even close-range aim was difficult in this pitching sea. Again the ominous boom.

"We've got him," said the Sergeant.

The Lazy Mary was slowing. Her motors were sputtering, and the next series of rolling waves brought the launch abreast her. There was a scramble aboard the Lazy Mary. The gunfire ceased.

"Lay to in the name of the law," the Sergeant shouted. "This is a New York City police launch."

Hooks grasped the rail of the Lazy Mary and bumping, bumping, bumping, the two boats came together. The Lazy Mary's motors expired in strange silence, but the Sergeant was not yet ready to board. Three men, drenched with rain, filed along the deck of the fugitive craft with hands aloft. While the Sergeant, rocking with the movement of his own boat, covered them, two patrolmen clambered over the rails nimbly and clamped manacles upon their prisoners.

Clark was now at the rail.

"Where's Bill McGee?" he demanded.

Bill McGee gave his own answer. They saw him rounding the corner from the wheel house, his sodden hair wildly over his eyes, a gun in either hand.

"Come and get me," he snarled.

Patricia never knew the details of the gun fight. She never wanted to know. A patrolman carried her below, tossed her into a neatly made police bunk, and locked the door behind him. She heard the pistols, she heard the roar of the wind and the pounding of the waves upon the floating and bound-together boats. But she heard most loudly the silence that came with the cessation of firing.

Bill, his boat sinking under him and all hope lost, fought to the end. And then when the foundering Lazy Mary—a hole in her side—was almost ready to carry the launch to the bottom with her, he was brought dying aboard and carried, with more tenderness than might have been expected, to a tiny cabin where futile emergency treatment was given Bill McGee, unshriven and unmourned died with seven bullets in his body.

It was Clark who brought Patricia to the windy deck. She was crying now, but crying with happiness. Clark was safe, and that was all that mattered. Clark was safe, and the rain had gone and the stars above the quieting waters of the Sound were peeping through.

"Not a casualty, lady," said the Sergeant proudly when he saw her. "That is, no casualty except McGee. Not a cop was even clipped. And three prisoners below. Your friend here had the narrowest escape. His hat is out there in the water somewhere, and it's been drilled through twice."

"Oh, Clark!"

She caught at his hand and held it tightly. His responsive grip was comforting and sweet. He seemed embarrassed, awkward, almost shy. He did not wish to discuss his part. When the launch had put about and was swinging back toward the city, Clark spoke. The man and girl stood at the rail, their eyes on the expanse of grayish water lightening in the coming dawn. Clark gestured below decks where the murderer of Julian Haverholt lay dead.

"Bill McGee confessed before he died," Clark said. "He told the Sergeant the whole story. And one of the prisoners confirmed it. He drove McGee to Julian's house and drove the car that took McGee and you away after he had shot Julian down."

Patricia turned very pale. Her voice was quiet.

"Bill McGee is dead?"

"He's dead."

"Do the police know I was kidnapped?"

"They know everything, Patricia. McGee's crew in trying to save themselves confessed everything. They laid the blame on Bill McGee but they told it all."

She was white and still a moment before she said:

"Then I'm free?"

"You're free, Patricia."

It was dawn when they reached the city. A radiance seemed to lie upon the town hushed in that moment before the sun would rise. The tall towers of lower New York far in the distance pierced the slowly brightening sky. The air was cool, touched with the tang of salt. Market carts and milk trucks rattled along the streets. The city was waking up when the police launch docked.

Patricia was ill with weariness, sick with relief, somehow strangely lost. She had been cleared of Julian Haverholt's murder. She was free. Free for what?

The policemen hurried into the station ahead, eager to make their reports. Patricia and Clark had been asked to return in the afternoon. They stood on the wharf now, alone together. The girl had no idea where she would go, what she would do next. The excitement that had borne her up had quite burned away. She looked forlorn and small in her crumpled tweeds, her face pale, her red hair tangled, her figure drooping from exhaustion. Clark's hand was at her elbow. He had steered her to his car, parked where he had left it, bright against the grayness of the wharfs. What next?

Patricia smiled shakily.

"It's over," she said.

"All over," he agreed wearily, contentedly, and said, "Get into the car, Patricia. You're ready to drop."

"I guess," said the girl a little faintly, "you had better take me to some hotel."

"A hotel! My darling, are you mad?"

She was in his arms. His lips were searching for her lips. He tipped back her chin. She surrendered utterly to the glory of his kiss. About them, on the lonely dock, there seemed to be the beat of circling wings. "And did you think I'd let you go? What made you dream I'd let you go?"

"Do you love me, Clark?"

Her arms were tight locked about his shoulders. She put the question as simply as a child.

"Do I love you! I have loved you forever, darling; I shall love you forever."

"That sounds like a long time," she could say from the security of his arms.

"It's not nearly long enough."

They laughed. Just then, in the first flush of their happiness, everything made them laugh. They laughed at Patricia's disarray, at the milk truck driver who stared and stared, at the policeman who opened the door of the station close by and closed it promptly.

Later, much later, when they were in the car and driving toward Long Island—Clark had telephoned his mother—Patricia said humbly:

"I was such a coward, Clark. How can you love such a coward?"

"Why didn't you tell me, honey? Why didn't you tell me about you and Julian?" he asked, sober for the moment. The steady gentle pressure of his hand upon her hand did not lessen. "It would have been so much more simple for us if you only had."

"I was a different girl then," this grave-eyed girl said. "I was afraid, Clark, I was so afraid that I would lose you if I told the truth. And I —I couldn't have borne that."

"You were afraid I wouldn't understand?"

She only nodded for answer, but her eyes met his eyes bravely.

"But I would have understood," he said, his voice husky with remembered pain. "I knew, you see, I knew long ago that you weren't Julian's niece. I knew it that day when we parted in June."

The memory of that day rose before them. Clark pulled the girl more closely into his embrace, her red tangled head lay at utter peace upon his shoulder. After a long while Patricia said:

"Was that why you were so horrible at Marthe's dance?"

"I was burning up with jealousy that night, Patricia. I thought that you loved Julian. I thought that I had lost you for good and all."

"Julian was good to me," said the girl, "in his own strange hard way."

Another moment of silence.

Patricia said, "Did Marthe tell you about me?" and looked up at the man who was looking down at her.

"I wouldn't believe Marthe. Then later I remembered meeting you down town at Eileen Sycott's long ago."

Patricia drew a long breath.

"That must have been bad for you, Clark."

"It was bad for a while," he confessed slowly. "I knew you too well, sweetheart, to think that you could do anything wrong. But I thought that Julian had fascinated you as he fascinated so many others."

"Marthe?" queried Patricia with an upward inflection.

"Yes," he said briefly. "Poor Marthe."

From her own happiness Patricia could spare a moment's pity for the other girl. Marthe March had conspired in vain. In the end she had lost everything. Clark's words echoed in Patricia's heart. Poor Marthe! And poor Julian!

They drove on into the sunlight. The life with Julian Haverholt seemed like a dream to Patricia now. She stood on the threshold of a sweeter, more simple life. A life clear-eyed and honest. Patricia was done with gambling, gambling for money and gambling with life.

"But won't you teach me bridge?" Clark asked.

"I have forgotten how to play it," declared Patricia. "Though maybe," she added after a moment of reflection, "maybe I will trump an occasional ace at the ladies' Friday afternoon bridge clubs."

Clark laughed as he bent his head.

"My little racketeer," he said.

And then he kissed her.

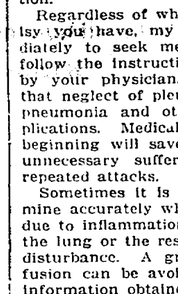
Pleurisy Is A Serious Ailment

Neglect May Result In Complications, Warns Authority

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

WHEN I WAS a medical student, pleurisy was considered an unimportant ailment. The physician was rarely consulted and the sufferer relied upon home remedies and self-treatment for relief. Fortunately, we now know more about pleurisy, respect it and treat it as a serious and not a trivial affliction. In fact, many specialists believe that repeated attacks of pleurisy should arouse suspicion of something more serious.



Dr. Copeland

In springtime and fall attacks of pleurisy are prevalent. It is probable that sudden change in weather, exposure to cold and dampness, drafts, fatigue and neglect of the common cold, are a few reasons for the prevalence of this affliction during these seasons.

Attacks Are Sudden

Pleurisy, as its name implies, is an inflammation of the pleura or lining of the lung cavity. The inflammation can be traced to germs which reach this delicate tissue. They may come from a focal point of infection elsewhere, as the nose, throat, tonsils, teeth or nasal sinuses. Occasionally, the germs are carried through the lungs by the air inhaled, but usually by the blood circulating through the body. There are different kinds of germs and different types of pleurisy. The type of pleurisy depends on the resistance to the specific germ and on general health.

Unlike the common cold and other respiratory disorders, pleurisy occurs suddenly and without any warning. Occasionally, the victim may go to bed feeling well and without any complaint. During the night or upon arising, he suddenly complains of a severe pain in the chest. This pain is increased on deep breathing and is lessened when the depth of inhaling and exhaling is restrained. When this sign is present, you can be almost sure the disorder is due to pleurisy.

Neglect May Lead to Pneumonia

Fever, cough, general body ache and fatigue, are other symptoms that must not be overlooked. A milder form of pleurisy was more common in former years and is a type that requires little medical attention.

Regardless of what form of pleurisy you have, my advice is immediately to seek medical advice and follow the instructions given to you by your physician. Bear in mind, that neglect of pleurisy may lead to pneumonia and other serious complications. Medical attention in the beginning will save a great deal of unnecessary suffering and prevent repeated attacks.

Sometimes it is difficult to determine accurately whether the pain is due to inflammation of the pleura of the lung or the result of some other disturbance. A great deal of confusion can be avoided and accurate information obtained by resorting to the X-ray machine. Its use is especially advisable in cases of repeated attacks of pleurisy.

When Insects Fast

The bureau of entomology says there are many insects that normally never feed or drink in the imago state, although many of these are capable of doing so. Most insects feed in their larval stage, the imaginal form being mainly for reproduction. The insects that live for only a few days or weeks rarely feed in the adult stage.

THE TEST OF A FRIEND

Would you measure the strength of a friend
In the balance which tells of his worth
You must prove that he's true to the end
In your trouble as well as in mirth;
You must travel for miles some dark road
Where the shadows so heavily rest
As you stagger along with your load,
Trying ever to put your best;
That experience will prove to you sure
Just how long any friend will endure.

For if, he is true, he'll be there
As he walks close beside you each day
And gladly he'll bear a part of your care
And the toll fate is making you pay;
For the test of a friend is the love
Which will cause him to stay when all leave;
Tho the clouds hang so dark up above
Still in you he has faith to believe;
Thus he proves is he's faithful and true
By the way he will suffer for you.

AT THE CLIFTONA

But now one of the most famous writers in the business, Rupert Hughes, has stepped forth to defend studios in their treatment of stories and to compliment the Paramount organization for changing his latest original in bringing it to the screen.

He wrote the sensational baby kidnapping story, "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen," which has been made into a Paramount picture starring Dorothea Wieck and Alice Brady and featuring Baby LeRoy It will be the next feature attraction at the Cliftona Theatre.

Assembly to Vote

Tom, Keith Lawrence (D) Cleveland, that they were not to leave the city and to be on hand promptly at 1:30 p. m. this afternoon.

Open resentment against this procedure was voiced by many members, especially those of the anti-sales tax faction who stated that the maneuver would cost the administration's foundation tax bill several votes.

One of these was Rep. William Boyd (D) Cleveland, who although voting for the sales tax on the last roll call, objected to what he described as "high-handed methods of the administration," and threatened to vote for the bill's defeat this afternoon.

Many of the members were in an ugly mood anyway because a few hours before, the state supreme court had handed down a decision holding the Boyd bill unconstitutional. This measure would have allowed the members $4 a day for expenses during the special taxation session.

The high court held that, in effect, the Boyd bill voted increased compensation for members already elected to the legislature which is contrary to the constitution. Judge Will Stephenson wrote the opinion, concurred in by Judges Weygandt, Jones, Matthias, Bevis and Zimmerman. Judge Wilkin, not a member of the court when the case was heard, did not participate in the decision.

If the house again defeats the sales tax which administration leaders have agreed to cut from 3 to 2 per cent, the leaders said it would be useless to take a vote on other measures in the permanent tax program, including the $68,000,000 school financing bill.

Should the bill be defeated, as even many of the members who favor it predicted it would be, the leaders plan to recess the lower house almost immediately, to await possible action by the senate on a tax program.

The senate appeared as far from an accord on any tax program as the lower house. Should it still be unable to agree on a program, there would remain no alternative by sine die adjustment of the special session.

He was last definitely placed in Chicago a week ago Monday, dining in a restaurant with Evelyn Frachetti, his girl friend.

She told federal officers Dillinger had dined with her and that when a squad of a dozen federal men descended on the restaurant Dillinger calmly walked out with a group of diners who had been given the "okay" by the federal men. Evelyn was caught in the net of the federal men in the restaurant drive.

Dillinger's father, at Mooresville, Indiana, also revealed that John had attended a family reunion there the week end of April 7 and 8. He had dyed his hair and although recognized by neighbors none of them reported his presence to police for fear of reprisals.

Again in Weston, Mass., the "super-bandit" was reported today as having taken part in a duel with a motorcycle policeman, and all eastern officers were searching for him in a car bearing an Illinois license.

In St. Paul, Minnesota, Dr. Clayton May admitted he had treated Dillinger for a bullet wound after Dillinger had shot it out with federal operatives who had trapped him. Dr. May and a nurse, Mrs. Gurniath La Delle are held on a charge of harboring Dillinger.

members of the state liquor commission to determine whether it has power to establish a closing hour.

Legislation to appropriate $125 to pay for publishing the city auditor's report in The Herald was read the first time and referred to the ordinance committee.

SEEK WATER ACTION

The water ordinance was again referred to the ordinance committee after some discussion in council. The ordinance was on the clerk's table when the meeting opened but the ordinance committee had made no recommendation. Councilman Frank Marion urgd that council take some action rather than let it lay dormant. Councilman Ben Gordon then made a statement in which he declared that new members of the council were elected last fall to try to get lower rates for the consumer and since the Ordinance read for the second time provides no reduction in rates for the consumer he thought it up to council to seek a reduction.

Councilmen C. O. Leist, one of the veteran members of council, then moved that the water ordinance he returned to the committee for action. W. M. Reid, chairman of that committee, is likely to call a meeting of council as a whole to discuss what action should be taken.

It is the concensus in council that the legislation presented should be passed or a new ordinance calling for still lower rates should be drawn up and passed by the city dads with the next move left up to the water company.

Questions and Answers

How much salt should be used in seasoning foods? What proportions are likely to be successful?

In soups and sauces 1 teaspoon of salt is sufficient for 1 quart of liquid. In batters and doughs ¼ teaspoon salt to 1 cup of flour is recommended. If nuts are added, the salt should be increased ½ teaspoon for every cup of nuts. For cereals, 1 teaspoon of salt should be used for every 2 cups of water.

Does baking powder make mashed potatoes lighter?

Adding baking powder is one means of making mashed potatoes lighter, but they can be made very light and fluffy without such tricks. Steaming the potatoes in the oven makes the potatoes soft so that they cream easily. Then the hot milk and seasonings are added. Beating the potatoes with a wood en spoon makes them very fluffy and keeping them over hot water allows them to stay hot longer.

What would you suggest to overcome food dislikes? I realize I am not getting balanced meals because of certain prejudices.

This will sound like a sermon, but make up your mind and exert your will power towards liking the foods you now find undesirable. Make repeated attempts and try the foods in different ways until the one that has the most appeal is found. You don't have to be especially fond of a food to be able to eat it with a degree of relish but eat it along with something you do like. It is the best practice to accept the bitter with the sweet.

For Better Pies

If you have trouble with pie crust getting soggy when you make custard or pumpkin pie, try baking the crust first for a few minutes. Baking the crust 5 minutes at 425 degrees makes a pie crust that will withstand the moisture of the filling and will not become soggy.

To roll a pie crust more easily, use a child's stocking with the foot cut off to cover the rolling pin, and a canvas sheet over the board. The floured, fabric surfaces prevent sticking and make the rolling of a smooth, thin crust a simple operation.

Chocolate Bread Pudding —A Milk Dish for Children

Chocolate bread pudding is more like a custard than a bread pudding and those of us that like bread the least, will enjoy this healthful milk chocolate dessert.

2 sq. unsweetened chocolate	6 slices of bread
1½ C. sweet milk	2 eggs
½ C. sugar	1 tsp. bak. powder
½ tsp. salt	½ tsp. almond extract

Melt the chocolate in the top of a double boiler. Add the milk, sugar and salt. Butter the bread and beat the eggs. When the milk is cool, add it to the egg. Add the baking powder and flavoring and pour it over the bread. Beat the liquid and bread mixture until smooth. Grease an oven dish, pour in the batter and set the dish into another pan containing hot water. Water should come up to ½ the height of the pudding dish. Bake at 350 degrees until firm. A smooth knife inserted in the pudding should come out without any moist crumbs on it. Serve the pudding with top milk or cream.

New Jersey Man Succeeds Sigler; Statement Made On Condition.

The Container Corporation of America announced, Thursday, that C. R. Hunsicker, who has been employed in the office of the plant in recent weeks, has been named plant manager succeeding Paul E. Sigler, who has returned to Indiana.

Mr. Hunsicker came to this city from New Jersey. He lives in Park-pl.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Container Corporation of America, reports net income of $291,690 for the first quarter of 1934, after deduction of selling and administrative expense, interest, depreciation, federal income tax and adequate reserve for year-end adjustments, and before profits on purchase of bonds and debentures. This compares with a net loss of $190,868 in the first quarter of 1933.

COMPARISON MADE

In order to present a fair comparison of earnings, it should be pointed out that the federal income tax deduction this year amounted to $51,000, against none last year; also that the reserve for depreciation was increased by $45,431 as compared with a year ago, and that current reserve against possible loss on bad and doubtful accounts has been set up, amounting, for the first quarter, to $20,839, which is equal to one-half of 1 per cent of total net sales of $4,167,898.

After deduction of $24,775 preferred dividend requirements for the three months, there was a balance of earnings applicable to the Class A and Class B common stocks amounting to $266,915. As each share of Class A is entitled to twice the earnings for any share of Class B, this balance of earnings was equivalent to approximately 41 cents a share in the Class A and 20 cents a share on the Class B common stock in the three months.

There was an accumulation of dividends on the preferred stock, as of March 31, last, amounting to $322,071, or $22.75 per share.

Walter P. Paepcke, president of Container Corporation of America, in announcing [illegible] said: "Our net sales [illegible] quarter of 1934 were 25 per cent larger than last year, on a tonnage basis, and 75 per cent larger in dollar volume. In spite of substantially higher selling prices the net profit was less than 7 per cent of net sales. Raw material and labor costs have increased more, on a percentage basis, than selling prices.

BONDS REDUCED

"During the first quarter of 1934 the outstanding bonds, debentures and preferred stock were reduced by $274,600, per value. Working capital during this period increased by $399,747. As of March 31, 1934 the corporation had a current asset ratio of 3.67 to 1, compared with 3.18 to 1 on Dec. 31, 1933.

"The immediate outlook continues favorable but future earnings, of course, are very largely dependent upon volume and prices, as well as raw material and labor costs."

Minneapolis also squared the series with Milwaukee by taking the long end of a 9 to 8 slugging match at Milwaukee. A long home run by Leo Norris in the ninth inning, after they had "blown" a six-run lead in the first, with Harris on base, gave the Millers the victory.

The other "turn about is fair play" victim was St. Paul, who was cannonaded into a 9 to 3 defeat by the Kansas City Blues at Kansas City. "Slim" Harris held the Saints to 8 scattered bingles, but errors in the sixth inning robbed h im of a shutout when the Saints received a "gift" of their three lone runs. Heimach, Fette and Claset gave the Blues 13 hits.

M'CANN WINS BOUT

COLUMBUS, April 19—Employing a ruse that was more than unpopular with some 2,000 booing fans, Earl "Wildcat" McCann, smashing 151-pounder from Portland, Ore., today had defeated "Silent" Rattan, Texas deaf-mute after 32 minutes and 56 seconds of wild wrestling here last night.

McCann, who was out-wrestled by slugging his way out of every hold the mute placed on him. After trying continuously to catch Rattan off his guard, McCann finally succeded by backing to the ropes and refusing to wrestle. Rattan turned to Referee Cliff Binckley to demand that he force McCann from the ropes.

In a twinkling, the "Wildcat" executed a head-over-heels flip off the ropes. His wrestling heels caught Rattan on top of the head and sent the mute to the mat in a daze. McCann then pinned him for the fall and the match.

DETROIT WINS OPENER

A chilly throng of approximately 20,000 saw the opening of the American League season between the Chicago White Sox and the Detroit Tigers at Chicago Tuesday, the Detroit Tigers winning the ball game, 8 to 3. In the above photograph Goslin and Greenberg are scoring the first runs of the 1934 season against the White Sox on Owen's double. Goslin reached first on a single and Greenberg on a walk, and both advanced on Doljack's pass.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

A large number of recreation ball enthusiasts are expected to attend the meeting to be held in The Herald's editorial room Friday at 7:30 p. m. when the possibility of having a league will be discussed — There are many details to be ironed out such as how many teams will be available for the league, what the entrance fee should be, a schedule, officers, and other sundry items * * *

* * *

Right now it looks like six teams are certain, it is hoped there can be eight enrolled * *

* * *

Boyscouts did a lot of work on the field Wednesday removing corn stubbles from part of the Southern Ohio electric lot but there remains a lot more work to be done —Mayor Bill Cady and Service Chief Bill Justice have promised to help get the field in condition and they are ready to do their part as soon as the corn stubbles are removed It will probably be necessary to harrow, then, drag, then roll, then light harrow, then again drag and roll—Mr. Justice, who built the excellent diamond for the Eagles a number of years ago, knows what should be done to get the field in shape, so its up to him.

* * *

Right now we're giving warning that the Container Corporation team will be a tough one—Red Lawhorn's going to manage the ball club and he has a number of good boys including Erv Trimmer, Clarkie Stevens, Ike Brungs, and several others in the fold — Glen Nickerson has his team partly lined up and so has the Ralston-Purina Co.—It won't take Troy White long to get his players in the fold and Cum Robinson is busy getting athletes together for his team; he asked the janitor, Thursday, to have possible infield candidates see him for try-outs * * *

* * *

It behooves interested persons especially potential backers and managers, to attend Friday evening's meeting * *

SEEKS TOURNEY

DENVER—Denver has high hopes of being chosen at the site of the 1935 national A. A. U. basketball tournament. Reports brought back from the 1934 tournament at Kansas City indicate that this city was being considered favorably by officials of the organization.

The favorable showing made by two teams from this region—the Wyoming University Cowboys and the Denver Piggly Wiggly independent team—is said to have impressed those attending the Kansas City tournament with the class of basketball played here.

4-BASE HITS FEATURE BIG LEAGUE TILTS

NEW YORK, April 19.—Maybe Jimmy Foxx wasn't kidding when he said he'd top Babe Ruth's 60-homer record this year. And perhaps the Babe himself wasn't fooling when he intimated he might turn the trick himself if the old legs didn't bark too soon.

And it may be that Blondy (They Can't Beat Us) Ryan was on the level when he pronounced the Giants 30 percent stronger than last year. Nor was Rajah Hornsby trying to spoof anyone when he said the Browns might reduce a few swollen craniums this semester.

Brothers Heydler and Harridge, too, were indubitably correct when they declared the balls in use had plenty of rabbit in them and that a record crop of homers was in prospect.

STARS IN FORM

All this by way of preamble to the fact that the players have hit their normal stride much earlier than usual. The real hitters are hitting and the real pitchers are doing their stuff.

In witness whereof, we offer Babe Ruth's initial homer - the 684th of his career - and two by Foxx struck in a losing cause.

Chuck Klein's second homer in as many days helped the Cubs to another win over the aged Dazzy Vance and the rest of the Reds, 8 to 4. The Giants blew themselves to another easy one at the expense of the Phils, 6 to 2. Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons held the hard-hitting Phils to five hits, and Blondy Ryan eased in four for four which is either a tribute to Blondy's newly discovered pitching prowess or a tip-off on the Phillies pitching. Maybe it's a little of both.

The Braves turned on the Dodgers, 3 to 2 and the Pirates come to life to nose out the Cardinals, 7 to 6, when Larry French and Chagnon outlasted a trio headed by Paul, the less talkative of the Dean brothers.

In the American league, the Senators again eked out a 6 to 5 margin over the Red Sox.

MACKMEN FAIL

The aged but hopeful Connie Mack couldn't find another thrower to check the Yanks and Ruth & Co, romped home 11 to 5. A brace of homers by Goose Goslin and Gerald Walker drove in five runs as the Tigers again topped the White Sox, 6 to 5. It is becoming evident that Mickey Cochrane has some real flinging to show the natives and it is equally apparent that the White Sox pitching is notable only by its absence.

Hornsby probably knew something when he said he had a few boys who could and would turn on the heat now and then to the discomfirture of the iron hats who think they are going places. Rajah trotted out Bump Harley against Walter Johnson's Indians and Bump applied a 2 to 0 plaster. Johnson also got some neat elbowing from young Pearson until the Brownies rose up on their hind legs in the ninth and bounced three hits for all the money.

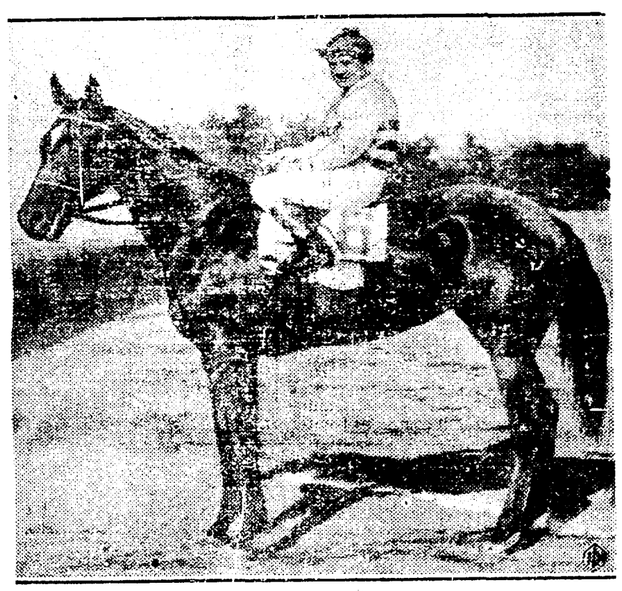
DENVER,—The Denver University Pioneers, co-holders of the 1933 Rocky Mountain conference football championship, will start spring football practice about May 1, Coach Percy Locey announced. Locey said that because so many of his men were working their way through school and could not give much time to spring training, the drills would last but two or three weeks.

Well Liked for Kentucky Derby



The fine showing of Colonel E. R. Bradley's "Bazaar" has won the sturdy horse a big following in this year's Kentucky Derby, to be run at Louisville, Ky., May 6. "Bazaar" rules as a "near-favorite" at odds of fifteen to one.

Sues British Lord

Half a million dollars is the price set by lovely Angela Joyce, English actress now in Hollywood, for a bruise inflicted on her heart. In a suit filed in London, Miss Joyce seeks that amount from Lord Revelstoke, recently-wed British peer, charging he broke a promise to marry her.

Amazed and disgusted, Reed blurted out:

"Senator, what in hell do you do to smell like a man?"

Musical

Nebraska's veteran champion, Senator George Norris, is the most modest of men. But of one thing he is privately most proud, his booming bass voice . . . He loves to sing, never passes up an invitation to join a quartet . . . Norris' favorites are light opera melodies; he detests jazz, is handy with the accordion, but never plays it outside the privacy of his home . . . The Federal Food and Drug Administration is investigating a number of cure-alls, unscrupulously trying to capitalize on the President's connection with the Warm Springs waters by using that name . . . One product, advertised as a compound derived from the Warm Spring waters, was found on examination to consist chiefly of Glabuer's salts, a common laxative . . . Last summer, Senator Jimmy Byrnes created a great stir in his home state, South Carolina, when he and his pet dog went to hospitals for operations at the same time . . . Jimmy recovered, but the dog died.

Acceptance by the Philippine legislature of the Tydings-McDuffie Independence Act will automatically fix a limit of 50 for the number of Filipinos who can immigrate yearly to the U. S. . . . Thirty-two of the 59 years of his life have been spent by mild, prohibition-minded Senator "Maury" Sheppard as a member of Congress. He was a member of the House for 11 years, has sat in the Senate for 21 . . . He gets to his office every morning by 7 o'clock, is ready to begin dictating answers to his huge mail by 9 . . . Representative Robert Luce, Massachusetts Republican authority on parliamentary procedure, was a Boston newspaper reporter in his youth, with the result that he acquired what he calls the 'night owl habit.' He hates to get up in the morning . . . The recent White House Easter egg-rolling party was genuinely profitable for a number of enterprising youngsters . . Adults without children were barred, so these kids hired themselves out to sightseers . . . Some made as much as $5 for the day . . . The Senate cloakrooms are supplied with various kinds of bottled water, but in the House, the members must be satisfied with plain iced water.

TRACK

Since the track meet is not very far off the boys of Walnut Hi are getting anxious to see how fast they can run. Walnut has several old veterans back to compete against other schools. Walnut didn't do much last year but they expect to bring home several ribbons with them this year. There are eighteen out for track, who ought to accomplish something for their school.

The Glee Club from Marietta College visited the High School Wednesday. The Glee Club consisted of twenty students. Their accompaniment was a piano, two violins, and a bass violin. The Glee Club sang, "Matona" from Lovely Maden" by Lassus, "Adagio" from "Moonlight Sanata" by Ruthonin, "Nocturne" from "Midsummer Nights' Dream" by Mendelssohn, "The Snow" by Edgar and "Salutation" by Gainis. The program closed with the Marietta "Alma Mater" and "Time Honored Marietta."

JUST WHAT YOU WANT TO READ

In the Senior class play, "As the Clock Strikes" the problems become deeper and deeper but yet looking from the other side it is only a game and so it rightfully deserves its name, mystery comedy.

It is more out of custom than anything else that the seniors are giving this play. Many people look forward to the coming of this play with great eagerness. We hope that this enthusiasm will be shown on May 3, the date of presentation.

Warren Brown acts the part of the host of a house party. He is trying to attract city people to his seashore, but the week the visitors are there it rains for six days, and he is at a loss to know what to do.

Grace Jinks portrays the role of the financier of Warren. She is trying to help Mark to make action to his play as she screams in the middle of the night.

Mark Dunkel seems to be the cause of a lot of trouble as a young playwright. He is trying to get some ideas for a play and in doing so a false robbery is planned. During the midst of the fun a robbery does take place to upset the whole affair.

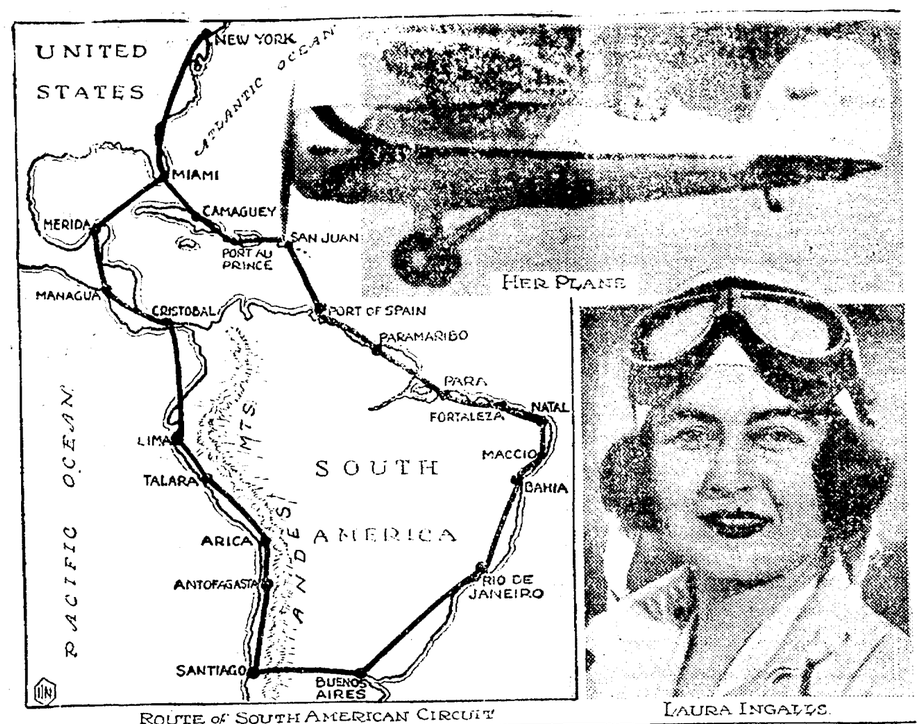
U. S. Ladybird and Course Around South America



In danger of being just another "forgotten ladybird," after her plans for a trans-Atlantic flight flopped in 1931, Laura Ingalls, American aviatrix, has won a place among the foremost aviators of the world, male and female, by her remarkable solo flight around South America. Although Miss Ingalls asserted she was making the 15,000-mile trip "just for the fun of it," friends of the flier hope that the prestige thus obtained may get her backing for participation in the London-Melbourne international air race next October. Besides the glory that would fall to the winner of the derby from Britain to Australia, there is a cash prize of $50,000. But Miss Ingalls would require a faster plane than the craft she used in her South American circuit, in which she became the third woman in history to fly across the Andes.

Our Loan No. 14-2684— looks after the painting and decorating of houses for a large real estate firm. His work requires quick transportation from one job to another, so he decided to buy an auto. He looked about for a bargain and found a reconditioned car of a popular model which suited his needs. He borrowed $270 from The City Loan to get the benefit of the "low-dollar" price. By this plan, no down payment is required but merely a simple payment of $19 each month, starting one month after he bought the car. Thus he pays for it out of his income, greatly increasing the value of his services to his firm, and giving his family the benefit of a new form of pleasure and recreation.
